3. Discussion:

a. These and other "arrangements" could be reinstituted in a crisis situation to provide responsive support to users. For education/familiarization many of the "special arrangements" are routinely implemented, on a temporary basis, in support of other exercises, special projects, etc.

b. Prior to any decision on the "regularization" of these arrangements, full consideration should be given to the impact on resources and other users. The current summary chart is not adequate to support a decision pro or con.

c. The process of "regularizing" any of the special arrangements would involve trade-offs between various consumer requirements competing for a limited resource (e.g., only approximately 10 hours of geopositioning capability is available per day) or added expense/effort in providing a service normally considered to be of marginal value (e.g., collection schedule data).
